This film was collaboratively produced and edited with the five Inuit communities of Nunatsiavut, Labrador. Since its release in 2014, it has continued to gain international attention, and be screened around the globe.
 - Over 30 Director screenings across Canada and internationally, including at Universities (Dalhousie University, University of Toronto, University of Guelph, McGill University, Cape Breton University, Laurentian University, and Thompson Rivers University), for community groups and organizations. Many other screenings in classrooms, for government groups, and for public interest have been organized. Forthcoming screenings at Beloit College and Carleton University. Also archived in museums and public collections. Notable achievement: being invited for inclusion in the Green Unplugged film festival, a global online film festival dedicate to environmental issues.
